The Hawai'i Rural Development Council (HRDC) is a statewide nonprofit organization committed to promoting and supporting the rural-based economic welfare of the State. The HRDC board of directors includes representatives from nonprofit and regional support organizations; federal, state and county governments; private sector and community representatives; and Native Hawaiians. The HRDC is one of 37 state rural development councils that are certified by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).

The workshops and training materials are provided with funding support from the Hawaii Community Foundation.
